I feel, you feel, he/she feels, we feel, YOU (plural) feel, they (everyone) feel — without the 's'. A better sentence than the first, correct sentence would be to make the verb 'to feel' redundant. If one is happy, one doesn't need to put feel in front of 'happy' in that sentence. This is because, if one is happy, one feels happy anyway.

Which sentence is grammatically correct between 'they make ...

Trying to change and wanting to be happy just like everyone else. Instead I've realized that I am here to live, to learn, and to let go of my attachment to conditional happiness. I don't connect to the feeling of happiness every single moment of my life, but I have learned to connect to purpose and awareness.
