Eating in Georgia: the supra. The Georgians have a unique way of eating that's a direct reflection of their legendary - and seemingly boundless - sense of hospitality. The place to best experience this is at a supra, or Georgian feast, where food, wine and music come together as the quintessential expression of Georgian culture. At a supra, the table is laden with food before anyone sits down.

TrishaCP on April 13, 2018 . This was absolutely delicious. The blackberry sauce was a tart and beautiful contrast to the fatty duck. I used Georgian fenugreek in the recipe (generally stronger than other fenugreeks) since it is mentioned in the beginning of the book, though not specified in this recipe.
